

CPSO Complaint Form Dr. Tam

SCHEDULE "A"

1. On or about January 22, 2020, as a member of the WHO Health Emergencies Program, Tam voted, due to improper political interference, to delay the declaration of announcement of a Public Health Emergency of International Concern (PHEIC), notwithstanding being explicitly advised on January 15, 2020 by Public Health Agency of Canada officials of the COVID-19 pandemic occurring in China.
2. On or about January 29, 2020. Tam advised the complainant that there as no evidence to require asymptomatic persons to quarantine.
3. On or about March 30, 2020, Tam provided medical advice to the complainant that wearing a facial mask while asymptomatic was "not beneficial", had negative health effects, and that it provided a false sense of security.
4. On or about March 30, 2020, Tam endorsed PCR testing as "highly performing", when she knew or ought to have known, that the PCR test was not designed for the detection of the COVID-19 virus and furthermore resulted in a high number of inaccurate results.
5. On or about May 21, 2020, Tam advised that parties who wished to challenge the evidence regarding vaccines be censored and the right to free speech be denied on social media platforms.
6. On or about December 3, 2020, Tam recommended the Pfizer vaccine and advised that it would "protect Canadians" when she knew or ought to have known that significant research and testing methods were omitted by Pfizer, thus rendering the vaccination potentially unsafe for injection. Tam failed to properly advise the complainant of all risks of injury associated with the Pfizer vaccine.
7. On or about February 10, 2021, Tam recommended as a treatment the widescale shutdown of the economy when she knew or ought to have known that there was no scientific evidence in support of said recommendation, and furthermore, contradicted WHO policy advising against widescale economic shutdowns.
8. Tam delayed recommending three-layer masks from June 12, 2020 when WHO made the policy recommendation, until November 4, 2020.
